This unique exploration company controls 27 million ounces of gold equivalent and is a steal in the 2022 tax-loss selling season!

The current consolidation in mining stocks offers a rare entry point in the ongoing gold bull market! This premier gold project developer controls one of the largest gold deposits in Canada!

Many gold stocks have fallen sharply in recent months for no reason - use the ongoing tax loss season to pick up fundamentally strong mining stocks now! This stock is way too cheap!

+++

The 2022 exploration season was a full success - various drill holes have once again confirmed the uniqueness of this world-class deposit with over 27 million ounces of gold equivalent!

Dear Readers,

Since childhood we know, Christmas takes place in December every year. That same time in year, the notorious TAX-LOSS-SELLING-SEASON takes place, which often provides smart investors highly interesting shopping bargains on the Canadian stock exchanges!

And this year in particular could be quite exciting for investors, as the rate hike cycle in the USA is likely to flatten out sharply beginning from December onwards. If the recession worsens in 2023, the American central bank may even noticeably lower the key interest rate in the further course of the year - which is not yet priced into the prices.

At the end of November, Fed Chairman Jerome Powell already gave indications of a potential slowdown in the pace of interest rate hikes, prompting markets to switch from “Risk-Off” to “Risk-On”. The weakening of the USD against other currencies prompted market participants to act more aggressively.

On the other hand, the Canadian tax loss season has been kicked in November and will last until around Christmas.

Mining companies based in Canada have their main stock exchange listing either on the TSX, TSXV, NEO or on the CSE. Towards the end of the year, Canadian retail investors often consider which stocks should be sold from the portfolio (mostly temporarily) for tax reasons, only to buy them often back again at the beginning of January.

It is therefore also important for German investors who have invested in these companies to buy precisely those shares in phases of weakness that they are fundamentally particularly convinced of.

Background information about the tax loss selling season from the perspective of Canadian retail investors:

The last quarter in the year is very important time for tax planning for Canadian investors. The two biggest challenges related to tax issues are minimizing taxable profits and finding ways to effectively manage losses.

One method is the tax loss sale (realization of price losses) in securities to offset realized capital gains in other securities.

A highly exciting and currently grossly undervalued Canadian resource stock is Tudor Gold Corp. - In 2020 the company was one of leading stock market stars in Canada with a performance of more than 1,000% at times!

(WKN: A3D078, Frankfurt: H56, TSX-V: TUD)

The consolidation phase since summer 2020 should be over soon - the share price is trading above a strong technical horizontal support zone!

What's particularly exciting here is that the moving average lines (20-day @ CAD $ 1.08, 50-day @ CAD $ 1.10, 100-day @ CAD $ 1.18, and the 200-day line at CAD $ 1.39) are all very close together! A series of buy signals is imminent.

Up to the all-time highs of CAD $ 4.51, smart investors could pocket over 300% of potential price gains!

The liquidity in the securities can be correspondingly low. When investing in the commodity sector (exploration companies, raw material producers, companies developing raw material projects), additional risks must be taken into account. Below are some examples of specific risks in the commodity sector: Country risks, currency fluctuations, natural disasters and storms (e.g. floods, storms), changes in the legal situation (e.g. export and import bans, punitive tariffs, prohibition of raw material extraction or raw material exploration, nationalization of projects), environmental requirements (e.g. higher costs for environmental protection, designation of new environmental protection areas, prohibition of various mining methods), fluctuations in raw material prices and considerable exploration risks.
